How Much Can You Save?

Now more than ever it is very important to keep rates as low as possible and find your best options for savings for the 2016 policy year. In contrast to the 2014/2015 policy years, the Bureau of Workers' Compensation (BWC) will not be issuing transition credits for the 2016 policy year that went to assist employers with the prospective billing implementation. As a reminder, enrollment deadlines are again earlier than in years past, so it is important to act today. Contact CompManagement for your free savings analysis and stop paying more than you need to pay.
